

About Ben: Originally from Yorkshire, Ben has spent the last 12 years as a physiotherapist working mainly in London. After a brief spell in Africa to work with a premiership football team he came back to start his own physio and personal training business seven years ago, which he now runs from The May Fair hotel in London. Ben loved the impact the BioPhotonic Scanner had on his clients. Equally importantly, he was blown away by Pharmanex's philosophy, scientific credibility and stringent safety protocols. After experiencing health benefits both firsthand and with his clients, Ben's enthusiasm around the business, as a vehicle towards a better quality of life, increased. He is now actively building a business asset that will give him more time outside of his business, as well as the financial security and flexibility to move to any desired location in the future.

Ben Kilner

- What advice would you give a brand new person? Don't treat your Nu Skin business like a hobby if your goal is to become successful. Treat it like a business venture you've invested £1 million in – with 100% commitment, sacrifices and pure focused consistent effort – and the results will come your way.

- What has been the best part of your journey so far? Meeting extraordinary people from all over the world and developing great friendships with them. Sharing experiences in both business and socially, from standing on stage in front of 2,000 people to having one too many drinks on the beaches of Barcelona.

Random Trivia: My brother once snapped my arm in three places from a "friendly" arm wrestle on the first day of a skiing holiday in France that I organised for 17 people.

"If you are going to be thinking anyway, think BIG."